INTRODUCTION. My first experience in observing the prayers and rituals of another faith tradition and race struck me as poignant and holy. Like most kids, I definitely could be silly and frivolous but not about religion. That conversation with the God of Abraham within the torah began with an African Nation called Mitzraim (Egypt) in the Torah, Bible and Misr (Egypt) in the Quran. In order to understand fully what African American culture is we have to begin prior to that conversations beginnings to get a full understanding because of our relationship to that conversation. A striking similarity between the two. Which is in my humble opinion the foundation of what in the very end becomes the African American culture. The God of Abraham places Egypt into His Judgement which is slightly different from Egypt’s judgement of Maat it appears because within The God of Abrahams’s judgement everyone is freely given the answer to how to overcome it not just a few.
