<td>Book is in good condition. Clean and tidy with no defects. On 1st February 1893 Thomas Alva Edison completed the first film studio, a hut on a pivot which could be rotated to follow the sun. The first film came later that year, when a camera caught one of Edisons assistants mid sneeze. From this inauspicious low budget start has grown a medium that has influenced world history as powerfully as history has influenced it. In cinema the first hundred years, David Shipman takes a year by year look at cinemas phenomenal growth. With 200 colour and 300 black and white photographs.</td>

This lines up with Inside Star Trek: The Real Story, which states that Courage was contacted about the 50-50 royalty split “after NBC put Star Trek on its schedule” (p.185). In my mind, this casts further doubt over the claim that Courage departed the series over the royalty dispute with Roddenberry. Oh man! I remember reading Star Trek Memories and thinking it was all very familiar then I re-read ‘The Making of Star Trek’ by Whitfield/Roddenberry and I realised Shatner had basically paraphrased every incident mentioned in that book. He added his own spin to it (putting himself front and center in the “bicycle gag” on Leonard Nimoy for example), but some parts of the book read almost like word-for-word recitations of ‘The Making Of...’, it was just unreal. Facsimile of “Advance Information on 1966-67 Programming: Star Trek” (7 p.) inserted between pages 202 and 203. Includes index. “A comprehensive look at the development and life of a television and cultural phenomenon [including] battles with NBC and the internal conflicts with studio executives to the behind-the-scenes decisions about actors and their characters, writers, scripts, directors, budgets, and the endless details of weekly television production.”--Jacket. Inside Star Trek -- Theme from Star Trek -- William Shatner meets Captain Kirk -- The origin of Spock - Real World article (written from a Production point of view). Inside Star Trek: The Real Story is a reference book on the production of Star Trek: The Original Series written from the first-person perspective of the operational decision makers at the time, in this case the producers. Both authors, Herbert Solow and Robert Justman, a studio executive on the first two seasons and a producer on the near entire run respectively, were two of the most important decision makers on the show at the time. The Inside Star Trek: The Real Story, p. 21). The fact is that Roddenberry’s pitch for The Cage is clearly just a rewrite of the Twilight Zone episode People Are Alike All Over a so much so that he even hired the same actress- and the finished pilot features ideas lifted wholesale from The Outer Limits episodes Nightmare and The Guests, as well as Stevens’ own Controlled Experiment. The latter was no coincidence. Star Trek was in fact an outgrowth of The Outer Limits. Gene Roddenberry watched our dailies all the time and took a lot of phone calls from our screening room. He was spurring his imagination and checking on the incredible quality control we had. I wondered why he was there but he was there more often than not during the time he was coming up with Star Trek. Star Trek: The Motion Picture: The Art and Visual Effects. Jeff Bond. 4.8 out of 5 stars 186. Herbert Solow and Robert Justman, two of the principal figures behind the scenes for the making of the original series of Star Trek tell their story, from battles with the network through the processes of casting, writing, and production. Inside Star Trek: The Real Story is a long-overdue memoir of one of the most influential events in television history, offering a unique perspective on the concepts and personalities that have since become international legend.
