There is a trend in the “western” world towards digitalization of governmental services. This process has as a goal to reduce costs in the public sector by providing more of the services digitally. Older adults are a population group that are increasing in Norway. In this study, different questions regarding their inclusion in the introduction of eGovernment have been explored. The methods used was a literature survey, interviews, and a heuristic evaluation of Norwegian eGovernment websites. The study showed that while the regulations and guidelines are adapted to make the websites accessible for older adults, they need to be used by developers that understand the needs behind the guidelines. For older adults to use the websites they require understanding of why and knowledge of how to do so. The study also showed that there is ethical consideration here. How much do we force the older adults to adapt to the technology, or do we adapt the technology to them?
Norway is a Protestant (although nowadays also predominantly atheistic) society, so the concept of running away from your home forever isn’t encouraged. You should of course leave when there’s imminent danger, but as soon as that danger has been removed, your duty is to go back and rebuild your home. In the meantime, Norway will be happy to accommodate your needs. A lot of refugees will, for so many reasons, rather choose to stay in the well-functioning Norway than go back home and rebuild, so there’s some potential room for conflict there. But that doesn’t necessarily classify as an immigrant. Latest travel advice for Norway, including how to stay safe during the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic and information on returning to the UK. Entry requirements. The information on this page covers the most common types of travel and reflects the UK government’s understanding of the rules currently in place. Unless otherwise stated, this information is for travellers using a full ‘British Citizen’ passport. The authorities in the country or territory you’re travelling to are responsible for setting and enforcing the rules for entry. If you’re unclear about any aspect of the entry requirements, or you need further reassurance, you’ll need to contact the embassy, high commission or consulate of the country or territory you’re travelling to. The Norwegian government fully pays for students in public universities, despite the fact that more than 30% of students do not complete their studies within 8 years [8]. Apart from small fees (from 300 NOK to 600 NOK), education for foreigners here is free in both Norwegian and English. Simple admission process. You do not need to take internal exams. Norwegian quality of life. The UN Human Development Report regularly notes that Norway is one of the best countries to live in. In 2019, the country took 1st place in the Human Development Index [9]. Here are some of the highest salaries (9th place in the world) [10], and life expectancy is longer than 82 years [11]. This includes people who visit family in Norway. On the Norwegian Institute of Public Health (NIPH)’s official website, you’ll find a map and the latest information about quarantine regulations. It also includes information for workers from Sweden and other countries in the EU/EEA/Schengen area that arrive in Norway. The page will be updated at least every second week. When travelling in Norway, you are encouraged to pay with a credit or debit card instead of cash to help reduce the risk of spreading the coronavirus. If you have a contactless-enabled card, this is the best thing to use as it a